

Japanese brand chicken breeds inherit the aggressiveness from their native breed sires. High level of aggression causes great economic loss to the poultry industries. This study illustrated the relation between testosterone and chicken aggressive behavior by using two behavior tests, and screened aggression-induced genes in chicken hypothalamus.

