In the field of Western philosophy, this program allows students to acquire basic methods necessary for philosophical inquiry, and to develop the ability to examine issues, including various contemporary problems, deeply and multilaterally through the systematic and literature-based study of the main philosophical issues from ancient to modern times, such as ontology, logic, epistemology, and subjectivity and objectivity.

In the field of Ethics, through the study of Japanese and Western ethics, including the history of ethical thought, students are able to study applied ethics in relation to life, the environment, information, education, research, robotics, space, enterprise, gender, and peace, deepening their worldview, view of life, and sense of value.

In the field of Chinese thought and culture, the program allows students to make an in-depth study of the contents and features of the 3000-year-old tradition of Chinese thought and culture, such as Shoshi Hyakka (the Various Masters of the 100 Schools), Confucianism, Taoism, Neo-confucianism, and Japanese sinology, with a focus on careful reading of the literature.
