

Nature Research Academies Workshop Communicating Your Science with the Public

It is becoming increasingly important for researchers to be able to clearly communicate their research to a broader audience, such as the public, the press, and even funding organizations. However, communicating complex specialized findings in an understandable and engaging manner is challenging for many researchers. This virtual workshop provides participants with practical strategies on how to achieve this goal.

Webinars

These webinars cover the following topics: